HOT STUFF in TOMORROWLAND

The wind was whistling through a tiny crack in the wall of Hot Stuff's cave.

"If I can just move this rock," said the little devil, "I'll be able to see if the hole behind it is small enough to be filled in!" He used the handle of his trusty trident to pry the rock loose; suddenly it tumbled forward.

"My gosh," gasped Hot Stuff gazing into the darkness beyond, "it's a big old cave!" He lit a candle and entered.

"Cave," he exclaimed, "it looks like an endless tunnel!" Hot Stuff stepped into the tunnel entrance and because he was curious he kept right on going.

After a long while he murmured, "It's just a pinpoint of light right now, but I'll bet that's the other end of the tunnel!" Now he was anxious to see where the tunnel came out.

"Jehosephat!" cried Hot Stuff as he left the tunnel at its other end. "This is a city of the future... it's TOMORROWLAND! That tunnel's longer than I thought!"

For quite a while the little devil wandered about in wonderment at the sights he beheld. "Why, the buildings are like something you'd dream about! Well, how do you like that! The buildings have doors on every floor—and the people have some kind of radio-operated machines strapped to their backs and are being carried right up to their outside doors!"

It was a miraculous world of the future, with all kinds of strange machines speeding through the air. And the air itself was perfumed with orange blossoms, and the temperature was exactly 75 degrees, which was perfect unless you were a devil and liked it a little warmer. But all was not perfect in the future—not by a long shot.

"Halt and give your number!" a voice roared in his ear. "You, red boy!"

"Don't shout at me," he roared back, annoyed. "Maybe I won't tell you..."

"Maybe you'll wind up in the air dungeon!" said the voice.

"Okay, don't get hot under the collar. I'm Hot Stuff and I'm a devil kid!"

"Never mind all that," ordered the voice. "Just give your number!"

Losing his patience, Hot Stuff hollered, "I don't have a license tag, you nut. I'm not bothering you, and if you're smart, you won't bother me, Bub!"

Suddenly, the little devil felt himself being carried along by something he couldn't see: an invisible light beam!

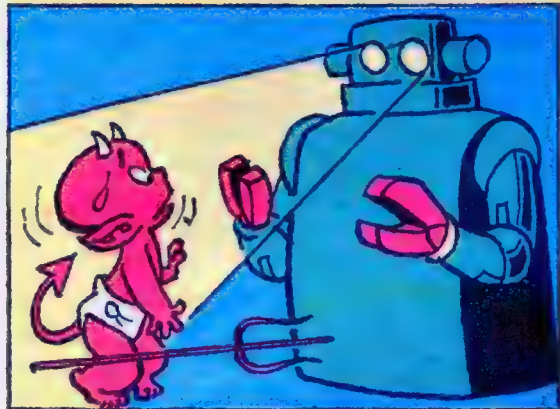

"I don't know who's doing this to me," growled Hot Stuff menacingly, "but if you want to stay healthy, you'd better cut it out right now!"

CASPER, THE FRIENDLY GHOST

There was no answer until Hot Stuff was carried by the invisible light ray into an odd-looking building that was shaped like a beehive. His journey ended in a great hall where he stood before a huge iron man—a robot!

"Now," said the robot in a tinny voice, "what were you going to do to me...?"

Hot Stuff gulped and stammered, "I d-didn't know it was y-you, s-s-sir!"

"I asked for your number," the robot reminded the little devil.

"I came from another world," Hot Stuff replied, "from a different time. So I have no number, only a name!"

"Then you'll go to prison until you get a number," declared the robot.

"How can I get a number?"

"I'll tell you that after you get out of prison!" came the robot's bewildering answer. Hot Stuff decided not to argue.

He asked, "Just one question. How could you hear me and answer me without radio equipment? And how was I brought here to you?"

"Microwaves," replied the robot. "My electronic brain sends out millions of sound, sight and travel waves. Let me show you again how the travel wave works."

The robot whirled; Hot Stuff helplessly rode an electronic microwave light-beam out of the hall and into the sky, stopping at last in the air dungeon—a clear plastic dome-shaped building on a cloud. He saw an old man standing nearby.

He asked, "Say, which way is out?"

The other prisoner replied, "Friend, there is no out. I came here long ago because I didn't have a number, and..."

"Save your breath," interrupted the little devil. "That's why I'm here, too! But tell me, what year is this, and what land is it?"

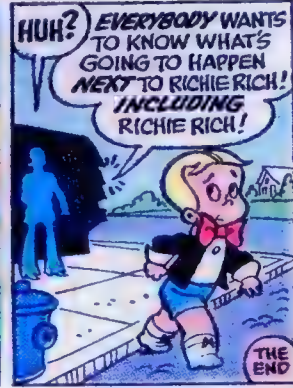

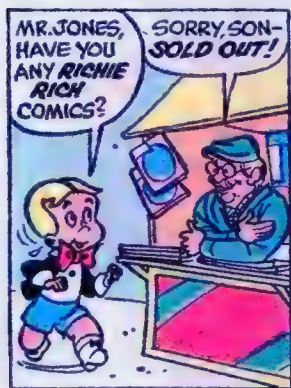

"The year is 1999," sighed the old man. "This is called Tomorrowland—but long ago, when I was a boy, it was known as The Enchanted Forest..."

That was too much for Hot Stuff. As he melted a hole through the thick walls of the plastic prison with his trident and flew earthward under his own magic power, he thought, "Tomorrowland has taken the place of my forest, my home? That's awful!"

But suddenly he smiled and told himself, "What am I worried about. By 1999 I'll have a new home!"

Hot Stuff found the tunnel and flew all the way back to his cave. He heard a chugging sound outside and went out to investigate. A steamshovel was digging nearby. He chased the workers with his trident, shouting, "I'm not going to let you start building Tomorrowland!"

It shoots as good as it looks.

The Daisy® "Safari Mark I"™ looks, feels and acts just like a big-game hunter's gun.

But it's scaled to your size, so you can make a big game out of learning marksmanship.

It's not a toy. You'll know that the first time you heft one and feel that solid weight and balance.

The "Safari Mark I" has things you'll find only on grown-up guns...like a crossbolt safety and trigger guard cocking (ask Dad about those).

And...to make learning marksmanship more fun, we'll make you a deal. We'll give you a $4.00 Trap-Target Kit for just $1.99 when you buy your "Safari Mark I" or any Daisy air-gun.

While you're there pick-up the new "Air Rifle Marksman" booklet (it's loaded with marksman information including local shooting education programs you can join), or send 50c to Daisy, Dept. 103, Rogers, Arkansas 72756 and we'll send you a copy.

Since the 1800's, American boys have learned marksmanship with a Daisy. Now it's your turn.
